Rites Held For Dr. Babcock

Funeral services for Dr. Havilah Babcock were conducted Saturday at 11 a.m. at Memorial Methodist Church here by the Rev. F. S. Wagoner and the Rev. R. L. Alderman. Interment was in the Babcock Family Cemetery. Pallbearers were Webster Babcock, Homer Babcock, Marshall Babock, Charles Babcock, Wallace Babcock, Thomas Babcock, Jr., Edward S. Cates and Clarence Guthrie. Robinson Funeral Home was in charge.

He was a life-long member of Memorial Methodist Church. Dr. Babcock, 66, died Thursday in Columbia, S.C., after an illness of several months. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Alice Cheatham Babcock, a son Havilah, Jr., a granddaughter, Barbara Ann Babcock, all of Columbia; a sister, Mrs. F. L. Murphy, of Appomattox; three brothers, Robert W. and Adelbert Babcock, both of Appomattox, and Thomas H. Babcock, Rustburg; and 18 neices and nephews.

For 27 years he served as head of the Department of English at the University of South Carolina, after previously teaching at Elon College, N.C., and the College of William and Mary. He retired from his administrative duties last June 30, but had planned to continue teaching. He had been accorded the only "distinuished professorship" ever awarded by the University. Enrollment in his classes was eagerly sought by university students and he numbered many outstanding Americans as personal friends.

He won international fame as a writer and received honorary degrees from leading colleges and universities. One of his most successful books was titled,"My Health Is Better In November". This was a collection of his hunting and fishing stories, many with a Virginia locale, and although published in 1947 remains in active sale in this country and abroad. Other books included "The Education of Pretty Boy", "Tales of Qualls N' Such." "I Don't Want To Shoot an Elephant", "According to Hoyle" and his latest, released in October, "Jaybirds Go To Hell On Friday." His stories were made available in Brailles recordings for the blind.

DR. HAVILAH BABCOCK

Critics lavished praise upon his writings. The Chicago Tribune commented that "Dr. Babcock's latest book has wit, originality, and the magic of the sportsman's world." The Richmond Times-Dispatch said that "For many years Havilah Babcock has been fashioning stories which are of lasting contribution to the literature of this country." He loved golf as well as fishing and hunting and was in great demand as a lecturer and championed the cause of conservation of natural resources, farm ponds, and water and forestry projects. His wife was widely recognized as an educator and served on the State Board of Education in

Dark Fired DemandAnd Prices High

The beltwide report of the Virginia Division of Markets states: demand continued strong for Virginia fire-cured tobacco during the second week of sales with prices showing gains over opening week, although quality of offerings was not quite up to that of the first week. Volume was classed as medium although some heavy sales were reported.

Gross sales for the week ending December 10 amounted to 1,380,128 pounds and averaged $44.02 per hundred. This average topped the one for the previous week by 53 cents. Sales for the seven days to date stand at 2,547,358 pounds for a $43.78 average. This compares with 2,093,948 pounds sold during the corresponding period a year ago at an average of $36.23.

Grade prices moved up as much as $3.00 per hundred pounds in some cases over opening week. However, the majority averaged $1.00 to $2.00 higher. Around one-fourth of the grades showed no change while some mixed, green, and dark brown tobaccos were off slightly.

The Dark Tobacco Sales Cooperative received 2.3 per cent of this week's gross volume on which was a little more than during the first week. Growers have "pooled" 1.9 per cent of the season's sales.

The Farmville Tobacco Market strengthened in prices and poundage during the second week's sale of the 1964 crop of dark tobacco despite the fact that opening week got off to one of the finest starts on record.

The dark-fired tobacco general average for all prices paid for the week ending Thursday was $45.62, an increase of 58 cents a hundred over the previous week . . . and another modern times record.

Growers offered 549,442 pounds of dark-fired leaf, up nearly fifty thousand pounds over opening week. Their gross on this poundage was $250,709.65.

The week's weight of sun-cured leaf was 48,586 pounds, and this tobacco, too, shared in stronger prices. The general average for sun-cured tobacco was $35.95, or an increase of $2.26 a hundred over opening week.

Post Forsaken

A continuing strong point for the market here is the "negligible" amount of tobacco failing to bring bids from the buyers. Considerably less than one per cent of the 1964 crop has found its way into the government pool. It is a rare basket now that fails to get an auction started, and is passed over.

The market average for both weeks on dark-fired leaf stands at $45.35, which is the highest currently among the three Virginia dark-fired markets.

The second week's average might have been even a little higher except that Thursday's sale found more common, green and mixed leaf than had been offered previously. Good leaf, however, predominates in the 1964 crop and only occasionally does it seem likely that the less desirable leaf will appear on

Appomattox Heritage Hears Rogers Company Plan For Commemoration

Suggests 8-Day Concentrated Program In June

Officers and the Board of Directors met here Monday to hear the Rogers Co. presentation of ideas for the Centennial Commemoration of the end of the War Between the States.

The packaged program of events, encompassing a concentrated period of eight days in June of 1965 with a daily Schedule of Events, has been outlined in a proposal booklet placed in the hands of each Board member.

Members were asked by the chairman, William C. Vaughan, of Lynchburg, to return to their respective communities and counties to obtain further opinion of the proposal. Next meeting of Heritage is scheduled for Friday, January 8, at 1 p.m.

"Like a New Busines"

John Mickey, field representative for John Rogers said that the Commemoration, for this area, would be "like setting up a new business," that there would be the expense of hiring Rogers Co. representatives to confer with local committee chairmen. Also, that Rogers Company, for the stipulated fee of $10,370, would supply a "chart of Organization", a "Plan of Action" for all division and committee chairmen, would write the scenario, script and narration for the Historical Spectacle scheduled for each night of the concentrated eight day Commemorative period, would provide a business manager to come here in January for preliminary planning and then to stay here for nine weeks, to supervise all income-producing events.

Costumes and Staging

The Rogers Co., if hired to plan and help produce the Commemoration events, would furnish a total of 275 costumes, a stage backdrop 250' in length plus music books, special properties and lighting to illuminate the entire stage area. A fireworks display would climax each evening's Historical Spectacle.

In his outline, Mickey chalked up $9,350 in expenses covering such items as ticket printing, steel and lumber for scenery framework, publicity, hospitality, special events and administration. Total cost for the Commemoration, as planned by Rogers Co. is listed at $19,720. He said that nearly all of this can be recouped through ticket sales to the Historical Spectacle, sale of a Commemoration borchure, medals, Commemorative plates and other items.

Mickey gave a figure of $5600

Clarke says that construction of the Concord section is now underway. Within the town of Appomattox curb and gutter construction on Route 460 from Church St. east to the corporate limits is planned for the early summer of '65.

McCann Elected New President Young Republican

Lynchburg Attorney Frank McCann Monday night was elected the new president of the Young Republicans Club. He will take office April 1.

McCann will succeed Bernard Carlton, who presently is president of the club.

The club passed a resolution presented by Carson praising the Lynchburg and Campbell County Republican Committees and the State Republican Central Committee for passing a resolution in November "reaffirming the conservative belief that no government should do for an individual or a group of individual what he or they can do for themselves and that no higher level of government should do for a local level of government what it can do for itself."

C. T. Moses, Jr. Named To Board

Appomattox Heritage, Inc., at its meeting Monday unanimously elected Charles T. Moses, Jr. to its Board of Directors. Delegate Thomas R. Glass, of Lynchburg, attended his first meeting as a Board Member. James J. Geary, state director for the State Centennial Center, Richmond, was among the Board members present for the meeting. Also attending were presidem, William C. Vaughan, of Lynchburg; vice-president, Dr. J. A. Mathews; secretary, Mrs. Emily H. Burke; and treasurer, James A. Smith, all of Appomattox, plus these other directors: John C. Steck, Farmville; John Spencer, Buckingham; Lawrence McWane, Lynchburg; and R. H. Gray, Hixburg.
